That day I went to a bookstore with my mum. I was bored. Then, as my mum stopped 33 the bookstore, someone caught my eyes. It was a man dressed in rags (衣衫褴褛). He was homeless. That didn't interest me, for I had seen many people like 34 before.

But in some ways he was different. This man was not sitting there with a sad 35. He had a radio in his hand and was singing happily to the music. The radio seemed to be the most 36 thing he had. And he seemed to pay all his attention to it.

"Mum, 37 radio is it?" I asked.

"He bought it, I think" she replied. I was still unable to understand it.

"But 38 a homeless man wouldn't pay money for a radio. Why does he waste the money on it? I guess he should buy some new clothes or food."

"Well, Sarah, sometimes food and clothes aren't the most important things. We 39 happiness, too. Life is beautiful. You 40 have the ability to find its beauty. Then you can always be happy wherever you go."

After that, every time I 41 the bookstore, I saw the man listen to his radio happily. I finally realized 42 is truly important in our life. Whether poor or rich, you have the right to pursue your happiness.

The man may care too much about music, so he buys a 43 instead of food and clothes. Because happiness is the key to life. Without it, there's nothing to look forward to. It can 44 your attitude (态度) to the life.

A home, a meal, clothes—these things are part of life. Happiness will never be 45 if we have a passion. What's often forgotten is that we all need a pleasure, a light in a dark day.

Ms Smith is a single mum and has a son called Mike. Knowing that she could not afford to get her son anything at all for his birthday, she felt broken-hearted. So she decided to post a hope on "Wish Upon A Hero" website for people to send his son cards. She knew Mike loved to check the mailbox and always asked if there was something for him. She thought that if he could get a few cards, it would make him smile and maybe, just maybe, he wouldn't be so upset that mum wasn't able to get him anything. The cards just started breaking in and her little sweetie was excited! Every day more and more cards came and this went on for about three weeks. The smile on Mike's face and the sparkle in his eyes brought Ms Smith to tears.

At the end of December, Mike started thinking about Christmas and he already knew that there would not be much under the tree for him because of family's economics(经济状况), but it didn't seem to matter him. All he talked about was how much he wanted to make other children smile. He decided that what he wanted to do was to make money to buy Christmas cards and send them to other children from poor families. He went out daily to make money. Not only did he make the money to buy the cards, but he also made enough money to buy all the stamps and lollipop(棒棒糖) to put in the cards. He sent out about 100 cards. Doing this brought him the same smile and sparkle in his eyes as the birthday cards that he had received did. Ms Smith was so proud of her son. Her son and "Wish Upon A Hero" have given her renewed hope that there are still people in this world that care about others.
