Eagles along with hawks and other raptors(猛禽) are great hunters. Their eyesight is up to eight times better than a human with the best eyesight. American's national birds, the bald eagle, can dive at a speed of up to 322 kilometers per hour. These birds have great strength, too. Eagles can fly with prey that weighs as much as they do.

Birds like eagles play an important role in the balance of nature. Many of them also help humans by eating the pests that destroy crops. They also kill sick animals that can spread diseases.

The modern world is a dangerous place for these magnificent birds. Thankfully, there are places like the Montana Raptor Conservation in Bozeman, Montana, where injured birds get a second chance of life and freedom.

At the center, volunteers do their best to treat injured birds. Some die from their injuries, but around 32 percent are eventually released. Some spend a few weeks or months at the centers, while others may need a year or more to recover. The birds that cannot return to the wild continue at the center and become education birds. Teams of volunteers take the birds to social and public gatherings to teach people about raptors and their habits.

41. What is American's national birds?

Free soloing is rock climbing without a rope safety equipment. It is so dangerous that less than 1 percent of climbers ever attempt it.

Alex Honnold grew up in California around a climbing culture and started climbing at 10. He would go to a climbing gym six days a week for three hours a day. Honnold was a straight-A student in school. But climbing was his main interest, and free soloing quickly became his favorite style. Since those early days, the 27-year-old has made over a thousand climbs. He is considered by many to be the best climber in the world. Experienced climber, John Long says over half of the well-known free solo climbers are dead. According to him, Honnold's greatest achievement is that he's still alive!

Honnold climbs by fitting his fingers into the cracks of the rock face. With most of his weight supported by his fingers alone, he pulls himself up. However, his ability to stay focused is as important as his strength. Other climbers agree that the fear of climbing without a rope is a huge challenge to overcome. Everyone knows that a single mistake would probably be a deadly one.

Honnold's great achievements have made him famous, but along with praise comes lots of criticism. Many blame him for taking too many risks. Honnold responds by saying, "I don't think I'll do this forever. But I don't think I'll stop because of the risk. I'll stop because I lose the love for it." For now he's continuing to follow his passion and climbing to new

For centuries, the Chinantec people have lived in the mountains of Oaxaca, Mexico. They set up villages and planted crops on the steep slopes. But the rough landscape made travel and communication difficult.

Shouting over the mountains can damage one's voice, but whistling does not. So some Chinantecs developed a language composed entirely of whistles. It can express almost every word in their spoken language. Some scholars think this form of communication dates back to the time of the first language.

Chinantecs use different styles of whistling at different distances. The shortest is used face to. A medium-range style can be heard up to 200 meters away. And for long-distance communication, they place their fingers in their mouths and let out a piercing(尖利的) whistle. In some cases, it can be heard over a kilometer away!

Over 104,000 Chinantec people live in northern Mexico, mostly in small villages where their traditional languages are spoken. The whistled language is mostly used by men, and while women usually can interpret it, they don't "speak" it.

Chinantec whistling has ancient roots, but can it survive in a changing world? Modern inventions like cellphones are whistling as a form of long-distance communication. And the Chinantec languages themselves may be in danger. As Spanish is more and more widely used, even within Chinantec communities, some fear the traditional languages will disappear. Linguists are studying this unique and attractive language while they have the chance. Yet they hope that Chinantec whistles will fly over the mountains in the future.

47. Why was the whistled language developed in Oaxaca, Mexico?

- A. Because the communication was difficult in mountains.

- B. Because they needed to plant crops on the steep slopes.
- C. Because the Chinantec people were born to whistle well.
- D. Because people there didn't like speaking very much.

48. Which is NOT true about the whistled language?

- A. There are different styles of whistling in Oaxaca.
- B. It is mostly used by women in small villages.
- C. It can date back to the time of the first language.
- D. It is a language consisting completely of whistles.

49. What is the present situation of the whistled language?

- A. Most people take interest in it.
- B. It has been replaced by cellphones.
- C. Linguists like to whistle very much.
- D. It seems to be in danger nowadays.

50. Which can be the best title for the passage?

- A. The Whistled Language in Mexico
- B. An Old Tradition in Mexico
- C. Long-distance Communication
- D. The Funny Whistlers in Mexico

How easy is it for you to say to someone "I forgive you"?
