Ⅷ. 书面表达(满分 10 分)

Dear Tom,

How are you doing? In China we have a lot of traditional festivals, but my favorite festival is the Mid-autumn Festival. Our family usually get together to celebrate it at home.

This year, the Mid-autumn Festival was very special for me. I went to my grandparents' house with my parents as usual. When I got to the house, my grandpa told me this year we would make mooncakes by ourselves. I thought it was really a great idea. Then my grandparents took out different kinds of materials and taught us how to make mooncakes. It was difficult but interesting. In the evening we admired the moon and enjoyed handmade mooncakes. What a meaningful festival!

I expect this festival, not only because I can eat the mooncakes and other special delicious dishes, but the whole family have a great time together.

Best wishes.

Yours,

Li Hua

When I was a little girl, I lived in Toronto. My father worked in a factory, and my mother stayed at home. Each year my father would dress up as Father Christmas and go through our neighborhood sharing our joy and candies with the children. But around Christmas in 1970, my father lost his job and my mother was ill. As a result, there was no money for Christmas. On that Christmas Eve my father still dressed up as Father Christmas. When he was about to leave, someone knocked at the door. A stranger came in and left a great bag of gifts for us. He said nothing, only smiled sweetly at my father, wished him a merry Christmas, and walked away. I was so moved. We celebrated that Christmas as usual with the kids in the neighborhood. We never knew who showed us great kindness on the snowy Christmas Eve. We do know that without him we would have had nothing under the Christmas tree. Our family have never forgotten this kind stranger and his gifts. Each year we tell the story and try to repay his gifts by giving help to others in need.

第四节 听力填空

这一节你将听到一篇短文。请你根据听到的内容,填写下面的表格,每空一词。读两遍。

(读速要求:第一遍读完后停顿 00'10"再读第二遍。)

As we all know, China is famous for tea. So it should be no surprise that the use of teapots is from China, too. However, it is strange that the invention of teapots came at least 500 years after tea was first made to drink. Tea leaves were placed directly into a cup of hot water during the early days of tea drinking. People created the first teapots in Ming Dynasty. A kind of purple clay called zisha was found around Taihu Lake, and it is the secret to making teapots. Because the clay can take in the taste of tea. If a teapot is used long enough, it'll store enough of the tea's taste. What's more, teapots are made by hand with lively drawings on them. Although Chinese teapots have stayed nearly the same over the centuries, they are still very popular today in China.
